A Pinch of Luck?

By: Sandra Kerr Mills

Pinching those not wearing green on Saint Patrick's Day began some time after Bostonians began celebrating it back in 1737. It is more of an American tradition than Irish.

The tradition of wearing green may represent spring and new birth as well as the lush green hillsides of beautiful Ireland.

Supposedly, wearing green makes one invisible to mischievous leprechauns, thus sparing him from their wiles.

Receiving a pinch for not wearing green on Saint Patrick's Day may serve as a warning to put on something green, or as an impish imitation of a leprechaun's tomfoolery.

I dare say there are many who would say they indeed did not feel lucky at all in having been pinched by an over-zealous prankster.

Perhaps in the years to come we could add a twist to the pinching tradition of Saint Patrick's Day by adding a 'pinch for luck' to the mix—a nice soft pinch done more out of love than orneriness. Wouldn't that be a hoot?

The Customer Service Experience

Customer satisfaction and loyalty are crucial for any business' success.

Customers usually take great care when choosing a company with which to do business. And service after the sale is just as important to them as the initial purchase.

Customers do not forget attitudes and promises. Your entire sales team is a reflection of your business and it is important to deal with people in a courteous, sincere manner, building trust.

Issues that may arise after the sale, needing your immediate attention, are opportunities to build a permanent bond with your customers and set your business apart as one who takes care of people.

Taking great care of customers builds loyalty that will cause them to come back to you again and again!
